Developments in 1H 2023

A year ago, the big theme in financial markets was the unexpected invasion of Ukraine. The war continues to rage but it has faded into the background among investors. In the first six months of 2023 focus was on developments in inflation and the resulting monetary perspectives as well as artificial intelligence. Isolated problems in the banking sector in the US and Europe as well as uncertainty over the American debt ceiling delivered brief negative blows to an otherwise overall upward trend in risk appetite among investors.

In this environment bond markets and share markets alike offered overall unexpectedly high returns.

The inflation rate peaked in many countries last autumn. The downward trend continues to be at an overall level in 2023. The reason is that energy and commodity prices in general have dropped compared with a year ago. It has been more difficult to curb core inflation. This is a cause for concern among central banks as core inflation expresses the level at which the inflation rate will stabilise, all things being equal. Central banks in the US and Europe continued to raise key rates in the first six months of the year.

The full effect of already implemented rate hikes and any further rate hikes has not yet been felt as a long time passes from when they are implemented to when they are visible in economic indicators such as inflation. Labour markets in the US and Europe remain resilient, which could suggest that it might be difficult to curb core inflation in the short term.

This is supported by the International Monetary Fund, which projects that global inflation will go down from 8.7% in 2022 to 7.0% in 2023 as a result of lower commodity prices. However, according to the IMF, inflation will not reach levels acceptable to central banks before 2025, after which there will be a possibility to lower interest rates again.

The banking sector was challenged in March by the Silicon Valley Bank collapse in USA followed by the Signature Bank collapse, which subsequently spread to Europe where UBS acquired Swiss bank Credit Suisse. The market's interpretation is that the increases in interest rates, which played a significant role as regards the affected banks, demonstrate conclusively the negative implications of the monetary policy pursued. Consequently, the market expects to see a less aggressive approach than previously anticipated. On the other hand, according to leading central banks higher key rates will continue to play a crucial part in fighting inflation. Any new problems in the financial sector will be managed by other means as was the case with the most recent problems in the sector.

Developments in China contribute to developments globally and in the Far East in particular. In March Xi Jinping secured his third term as president of China. At the same time the country's growth target was set at 5% for 2023. So far growth and the extent of implemented fiscal and monetary stimulus measures have fallen short of expectations.

Yields on government bonds from leading markets have trended slightly higher, with the largest increases in shorter-term bonds. The first six months of the year saw growing interest in Danish mortgage bonds and yields on these bonds went down.

The corporate bond market was very stable in 1H 2023 recording a small decline in the High Yield segment and largely unchanged yields on Investment Grade bonds. Bonds issued by emerging market countries were also extremely stable. Yields on bonds issued in hard currency remained close to unchanged at market level whereas yields on bonds issued in local currency fell and currencies generally appreciated against DKK. The Brazilian real and the Mexican peso strengthened the most. In contrast the Nigerian naira, the Argentine peso and the Turkish lira weakened considerably.

Artificial intelligence was the big focal point in equity markets in the first half of 2023. Equity market gains in 1H were largely driven by major companies in this area. As a result, IT and communications services were the best performing sectors on a global level. Better than expected economic developments also benefited companies within consumer discretionary. In contrast the energy sector was the poorest performer, which was attributable to lower oil and natural gas prices. In this environment value shares were unable to match growth shares.

Translated to DKK, Latin American shares were the top performer in the first six months of the year aided by rising exchange rates in Mexico and Brazil. US and Japanese shares benefited from the interest in AI and European shares rose overall on the back of an improvement in energy supply and a stronger than expected economy. Due to declining commodity prices and the more subdued Chinese economy, the Far East, Africa and the Middle East were the weakest regions during the period.

Profit and assets

The investment fund recorded an overall profit of DKK 1,2bn for 1H 2023 compared to a loss of DKK 4,7bn for 1H 2022.

Assets totalled DKK 35,06bn at the end of 1H 2023 compared to DKK 33,59bn at the beginning of 2023.

Events after the end of the half year

Up until today no matters that change the assessments of the Interim Report have occurred.

Accounting policies and audit
